*Embracing your feet they became free,
Of the depraved body and the senses that deceive;
Master, let your feet work on me too,
As Nataraja, the cosmic dancer of Thillai,
Dancing in Chidambaram in the dead of night. 90*

*Bowing at His feet the misery of life melts away,
Though no word'd catch the range of His power,
These lines when sung from the depth of one's heart,
Assures the devotee a place with the blessed ones,
In Shivapuram under Shiva's grace. 95*

7. In the last ten lines, the power, the pyrotechnics, and passion of the preceding sections pave the way for a sober and pedestrian rounding up. The personal concern gives way to the Institutional and the place of 'action' too shifts from Thiruperunthurai to Chidambaram. The Shiva of the former temple yields to the Cosmic dancer – Thillai Nataraja.

Shiva is the Supreme Lord. He is the Absolute. In his transcendent state he represents the unmanifest, beyond Space and Time and it is all inter-penetrating. But the manifested world is portrayed symbolically as the dance of Shiva i.e. Nataraja – the Cosmic Dancer. So dance is the metaphor for manifestation and the movement of life.

When the saint was asked by the devotees at the temple in Chidamparam as to the import of his entire devotional outpourings, he pointed towards the Cosmic Dancer within the inner sanctum and walked into it and entered eternity leaving no mortal remains behind.
